expressivism has been dominating much of the metaethical debate of the past three decades the aim of this book is to address a number of questions that have been neglected in the previous discussion these primarily concern the psychological commitments and the methodological status of expressivism as well as important differences and similarities between the approaches of the classic expressivists ayer stevenson hare blackburn und gibbard most people have wondered whether anything really matters some have temporarily thought that nothing really matters and some philosophers have defended the view that nothing really matters however if someone thinks that nothing matters if they are a nihilist about value then it seems that it is irrational for them to care about anything it seems that nihilism about value mandates total indifference this is the problem of nihilism allan hazlett addresses in the epistemology of desire and the problem of nihilism hazlett argues that the problem of nihilism arises because desire and thus caring is a species of evaluation that admits of irrationality this contradicts the influential humean view that desire does not admit of irrationality which has a ready solution to the problem of nihilism since desire does not admit of irrationality it cannot be irrational to care about something that you believe does not matter however following g e anscombe hazlett argues that desire has the same relationship to goodness as belief has to truth just as truth is the accuracy condition for belief goodness is the accuracy condition for desire this reveals desire as an appropriate target of epistemological inquiry in the same way that belief is an appropriate target of epistemological inquiry desires can amount to knowledge in the same way that beliefs can amount to knowledge and crucially for the problem of nihilism desire admits of irrationality in the same way that belief admits of irrationality nevertheless although it is obviously irrational to believe something that you believe is not true hazlett argues that it is not irrational to desire something you believe is not good despite the fact that goodness is the accuracy condition for desire this provides a solution to the problem of nihilism and shows that nihilism about value can coherently be combined with the anti humean view that desire is a species of evaluation an interdisciplinary collection of papers on freud s sixth and final case psychogenesis of a case of homosexuality in a woman to date this case has received very little attention which can be seen as a sign of the marginalization of lesbians in both psychoanalytic theory and culture this text seeks to rectify this neglect providing a forum where questions surrounding this case can be discussed this edition first published in 1999 routledge is an imprint of taylor francis an informa company a quarterly review of philosophy the 7th international workshop on fuzzy logic and applications held in camogli

2007 presented the latest findings in the field this volume features the refereed proceedings from that meeting it includes 84 full papers as well as three keynote speeches the papers are organized into topical sections covering fuzzy set theory fuzzy information access and retrieval fuzzy machine learning and fuzzy architectures and systems this volume marks the coming into its own of a discipline in philosophy theory of desire it presents discussions whose primary focus is on desire with secondary mention of its implications for ethics action emotion mind and so forth desire is a rich term meaning wish and want willingness and relish appetite and lust this volume is an effort to analyze the concept of desire and its different practical contexts from a morally philosophic point of view by analyzing multiple definitions and studying underlying motivations the authors offer a variety of explanations and interpretations the volume consists of three main parts the first part desire and practice examines desire as a mental state that seeks personal satisfaction the second part of the volume desire and moral life explores social cultural and literary facets of desire finally in the third part business ethics and other contexts the authors apply praxiological principles to the business world examining the conflict between frugality and consumerist ideology the role of intuition in decision making and the need for design education as the basis of effective planning the contributors to this the newest volume in transaction s praxiology series seek to explore desire in praxiological terms with an eye toward the three e s of praxiology ethics effectiveness and efficiency in doing so they demonstrate that desire is central for practical activity in general and work in particular using reconstructive ideas available in classical indian original works this book makes a departure in the style of modern writings on indian moral philosophy it presents indian ethics in an objective secular and wherever necessary critical manner as a systematic down to earth philosophical account of moral values virtues rights and obligations it thereby refutes the claim that indian philosophy has no ethics as well as the counter claim that it transcends ethics it demonstrates that moral living proves that the individual his society and the world are really real and not only taken to be real for behavioral purposes as the advaitins hold the self is amoral being a non agent moksa is not a moral value and the karmic theory because of involving belief in rebirth does not fuarantee that the doer of an action is also the experiencer of its results contrary to what is commonly held and indian ethics can sustain itself even if such notions are dropped rajendra prasad calls indian ethics organismic because along with ethical concerns it also covers issues related to professions politics administration sex environment etc therefore in one format it is theoretical and applied normative and metaethical humanistic and non humanistic etc of course within the limits of the then cognitive enquiry
